CURING THE BLUES. Just Try Turning Up the Corners of Your Mouth.

A well known doctor of Minneapolis who has made a specialty of nervous diseases has found a new remedy for the "blues." As no drugs are administered, he has felt safe in experimenting with at least a half hundred melancholy patients and now declares him-self thoroughly satisfied with the good results of his treatment. His prescription reads something like this: "If you keep the corners of your mouth turned up, you can't feel blue." The directions for taking are, "Smile, keep on smiling, don't stop smiling." It sounds ridiculous, doesn't it? Well, just try turning up the corners of your mouth, regardless of your mood, and see how it makes you feel. Then draw the corners of your mouth down and note the effect, and you will be willing to declare "there's something in it."

The doctor treats his nervous pa tients to medicine when necessary. but when the case is one of pure melancholy, without bodlly ill, he simply recommends the smile cure. He has the patient remain in his office and smile. If it isn't the genuine article, it must at least be an upward curvature of the corners of the mouth, and the better feelings follow inevitably. The treatments are followed up regularly. and the patients all testify to their good effect. It takes considerable persuasion to luduce some of them to apply the cure, and of course the greater number of patients are women, for when a man is blue he is bound to be blue in spite of everything, but a woman is more easily persuaded to try to

The doctor declares that if persons will only draw down the corners of their mouths and use sufficient will power they can actually shed tears. On the other hand, if they will persistently keep the corners of the mouth turned up pleasant thoughts will chase away the gloomy forebodings. His discovery grew out of an experience in his own home. His wife was of a nervous and rather morbid temperament, and when in a despondent mood he would ask her to "smile a little" until the saying came to be a household joke. But it brought about good results, and then came the inspiration to try the same cure on others.

The doctor has not patented his remedy, and it is free to all who choose to take advantage of it - Minneapolis

Typewriting In Arabic Selim S. Haddad has invented a typewriter that seems to overcome most, if not all, the difficulties of printing Arabic characters. In devising the machine he had to consider the enormous number of characters, the spacing of the letters, the necessity for printing when required above, on or below the ters, for which there is no uniform principle, every character having its own joining peculiarities. He reduced the number of signs from 638 to 53 without sacrificing the essentials of modern writing. He met the difficulty of the varying breadth of letters by splitting some into two separate units. Out of four years devoted to the work he spent eighteen months in the United States, and his invention cost him £1,-000. A thorough trial of the machine has been ordered by the sirdar, and if the test proves successful the typewriter is likely to be adopted in the Sudan administration offices and by the business men of Cairo and Alexandria .-

Buying a Ring. A young man who works in a Chestnut street store bought a dlamond ring some time ago. He was to pay for it on the installment plan, $15 a month. He made the first payment, and the diamond was delivered to him. At the end of the first month the collector came around again. The young man was broke. Finally he went to a pawnbroker, borrowed $15 on the ring and paid the collector In three weeks he got who taught Lord Byron boxing, was in the ring out by paying $16.50. Then in another week the collector came around again. Once more the ring was pawned. Then it became a struggle for the young man to get the ring out in time to pawn it again, but he did. It has now been four months since the man is paying double interest, and the pawnbroker is custodian of the ring .-Philadelphia Times.

The Population of London. The population of London, according to the authoritative and careful calculations of Mr. Welton, published in the December (1900) issue of the Royal Statistical society's journal, amounted to only 1,060,000 in 1801. This figure had doubled itself by 1841. In 1891 the total reached 5.442,000 and by 1901 was probably 6.250,000. The area included, it should be said, is not precise ly that of the census returns, so that the figures, though based upon the census returns, differ considerably from But practically we may say that in the lapse of a century the inhabitants of London multiplied sixfold. Left Handed Medicine. An Atchison druggist tells this story and declares that it is true: He had ed him, "How are you?" and he gave tousilitis, but did not send for a doctor, as he knew he would be all right as soon as the swelling "broke." But his wife was worried and insisted on sending for a doctor. When the doctor arrived, he looked thro gh his mediclue case, and said he had nothing duced the greatest minds. Boxers at a Coronation Officers intrusted with the conduct of the coronation will have no need to resort to an expedient to preserve order which was deemed necessary when the king's great-uncle, George IV., was crowned in 1821. It was then feared that sympathizers with Queen Caroline would create a disturbance at the door of Westminster abbey, so a noted pugilist of the day, "Gentleman Jackson," structed to bire some twenty well known bruisers. These gentry were attired as king's pages and posted on duty, and the very look of them was enough to calm the turbulance of the supporters of Caroline's cause .- London News.

The change made in the Tax Law of said wife...... Defendants.

In Chancery.

The object of this suit is to sell for ing unpaid Tax bills, will force set to ing unpaid Tax bills, will force us to collect them much earlier than here-tofore, at a season perhaps when money will be scarcer than now. Therefore we will advise all persons to psy before December 1st, 1901, and save the penulty.
Your humble servants.
